Mrs. J. Fairfield Carpenter, whose splendid home and delightful hospitalities have formed the subject of many a pleasant theme the past winter, gave a luncheon yesterday, or rather a midday feast, for her guest, Miss Halstead of Cincinnati, to whom a company of twelve ladies were invited. They were Mrs. Hitt, Miss Shepard, Miss Condit Smith, the Misses Hutchinson, the Misses Tiffany, Miss Ledyard, Miss Mattingly, Miss Britton, Miss Anderson and Miss Bigelow. The center piece was of Royal Berlin ware, the tall epergne in the middle being filled with fruits, and on the smaller ones at each end were great China roses, filled with candide rose leaves. Circles of pink tulips decked the corners of the table and over the linen were sprayed long-stemmed roses and their with the street of the stable and over the linen were sprayed long-stemmed roses and their with the stable and the st linen were sprayed long-stemmed roses and their shiny foliage. The flowers at each place were clusters of Parma violets, tied with long pink ribbon bows. All sorts of pretty conceits in serving the luncheon formed agreeable surin serving the luncheon formed agreeable sur-prises to the guests. The first course was oranges filled with a delicious mixture, which was partaken off by using the long straws that lay alongside each plate. Terrapin was served in title pewter saucepans, Roman punch in pink glasses, and ice cream roses, with foliage, was the fanciful winding up of the meal.

Mrs. Clarkson and Miss Lucy Corkhill are now at Cannes, where surrounded by orange and palm trees, out-door life in the garden of their pension seems to be an ideal, restful existence. Cannes is thoroughly English this year and only a few of the traveling Americans are enjoying its pleasures.

Mrs. Pellew gave a luncheon yesterday. Mrs. Richard Townsend entertained a comcany at dinner on Sunday evening. Miss Florence Bayard will remain here at Mrs. Hearst's house for some time. Most of the latter's acquaintances here think that she will return here shortly and spend the summer

Mrs. Lamar has been back from her winter visit south for several weeks and has been making her calls on fine afternoons, to none of which was she able to give attention during the all months. Mrs. J. H. Baxter intends to take an apartment at the Shoreham. Representative and Mrs. McCreary are in no hurry to go to their home until the weather be-comes milder all through the east. Their son graduates the coming summer from Yale. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dix of Philadelphia

THE RESULT OF A FIGHT. Three Men Attack One and Beat Him Badly-

Frank W. Heygster's saloon was the scene of conflict Friday night which ended seriously, but fortunately the victim of the cowardly as sault did not lose his life. Ex-Policeman Robert E. Hutchinson with a soldier named John Burke had a bottle of beer between them. Hutchinson got on the automatic scales and weighed himself and in getting off he accidentally broke a small pane of glass.

John Horrigan, the bartender, went to him and they had some words about paying for the glass and the fight soon started. Horrigan's account of the affair was: "I picked him up, threw him against the billiard the saloonkeeper, his bartender and Collins $20 each, and Hutchinson was fined $10 for breaking the glass.

Lawyer Hay, who appeared for those who were fined for assault, wanted to note an appeal, but the court informed him that under the new law no appeal could be taken.

DIED AT THE HOSPITAL

E. Dorsey Atchinson Picked Up Unce and Lives but a Short Time.

An elderly man, named E. Dorsey Atchinson. was taken suddenly ill on the street near 8th and E streets yesterday and he fell to the sidewalk unconscious. He had been a sufferer from Bright's disease of the kidneys and uramic poisoning was the cause of his fatal attack. Policeman Allen sent for the patrol wagon and the sick man was removed to the Emergency Hospital, where he died about 2:30 o'clock this

When taken to the hospital he was in a dying condition and Drs. Middleton and Hall did what they could to relieve his suffering during what they could to relieve his suffering during the few hours that remained for him to live. The deceased was a lawyer, and formerly lived in New York. It is said that he has wealthy relatives in Baltimore and two sons in this city, but the police were unable to find them yesterday. Today it was learned that more than thirty years ago the deceased was a merchant on Pennsylvania avenue in this city. It was also learned that his wife now resides in Baltimore, where he also has a daughter named May Atchinson. His sons names are Winfred S. and Grove Atchinson, and the former was once a salesman in a son, and the former was once a sal furniture store in this city.

PEACE FIRST, CASH NEXT. The Irish Fund Will Not Be Distribu

OILS AND AQUARELLES. A Splendid Display of Local Art.

The exhibition by the Society of Washington

Artists, at the Woodward & Lothrop galleries last evening, was at once a charming socie affair and a distinct artistic success, judged from a most exacting point of view. Many per sons prominent in public life and leaders in fashionable society were present, and to my that visitors were alike surprised and delighted at both the extent and quality of the display is to state the truth very mildly. Notwithstanding the comparatively short time allowed for preparation after the exhibition was de ided upon, every artist named in the catalog is most picked him up, threw him against the billiard table, twisted his leg and then I smashed him."

While Hutchinson was being whipped the proprietor and Stephen Collins also took part and the ex-policeman, in addition to getting his face bruised and his eyes blacked, was kicked on the head.

While the fight was in progress the door was locked, so that the soldier could not get out. He stood by and saw the three men beat his companion and he did not raise his hand to prevent the latter from being killed.

During the discussion of the case in the Police Court today Judge Miller said that if the front door had not been locked the fine specimen of a soldier would have reached the arsenal before the fight was over. When Hutchinson got outside he broke the large plate glass window and then ran to a street car, but the others followed him and renewed the assault.

In disposing of the case Index Willer fined without reflecting upon the quality of the creditably represented, and not a few of them haps unwise to select anything for special mention; but a running comment may be made on a few of the more striking successes a cred without reflecting upon the quality of the many examples not mentioned. In this spirit attention is called to the contributions of Mr. Macdonald, who is admirably represented in portraiture, landscape and ideal subjects. Each example is excellent in itself, and a promise of still better and even of y cat things in future. Nearly if not quite as much may be said in regard to Messrs. Siebert, Waltman, Nichols and Dennison, each of whom has done himself infinite credit. Miss Perrie, too, has won new laurels. Her water color "At the Wharf" is an exquisite bit, true in drawing and crisp and sparkling in general effect. Naturally enough it was marked "sold" early in the evening, and that it should go to the collection of an artist of refined taste and sensibility is quite in accord with the fitness of things. Then, in their way, nothing can be better than Miss Terry's "Azalias" and "Rose and Book." Miss Daisy Brown's "Study of a Young Girl" is most creditable in modeling and color, and justifies all the good things that have been expected of her. Marked improvement is shown also in the work of Mr. Parker Mann, several of whose contributions were bought at once.

Of the older group. Max Weet is merhan the also in the work of Mr. Parker Mann, several of whose contributions were bought at once. Of the older group, Max Weyl is perhaps the largest exhibitor, and some of his landscapes show him at his best. Mr. Johnston is also well represented in his specialty of landscapes with sheep and cattle, in which, by the way, he appears to better advantage than in his large oriental subject on the east wall. Holmes, Miller, Moser and Messer have all added materially to the success of the exhibit. The miler, Moser and Messer have an added ma-terially to the success of the exhibit. The last named gentleman has not shown much lately, but in what he exhibits now he has made amends for a long absence. His large canvas "A New England Road" is a serious and canvas "A New England Road" is a serious and dignified work of art, which comes very near being great, and his two smaller bits "Sunset in Maine" and "Evening on the Scine" are no less attractive in their way. Mr. Poole, too, has been something of a stranger here lately, and he likewise shows better work than formerly. The only portrait of any pretension is that of Messer, by Uhl, which is a capital representation in expression, pose and color; but the little statuette in the hand of the sitter needs to be retouched to make its character and sur-be retouched to make its character and pur-pose clear. Instead of adding to, it detracts somewhat from, the interest of the picture. The list of honorable mentions might justiy be extended still farther, but unfortunately space does not now permit. Attention should, however, be called to the sculptures in terra cotta by Dunbar who is a of the artists and citizens are alike due for the very liberal part they have taken in the affair, which is in every way creditable in the highest degree to all concerned. During the evening light refreshments were served, and music by the Weber orchestra added greatly to the attractions of the occasion.
